On Wednesday C. A. Griest, of Guernsey, talked to the convention on "Planting and Care of a Young Peach Orchard". Location, he said, is the first consideration, and as a general proposition is required to establish good water and air drainage. He said that any soil that will grow chestnuts should produce peaches. Planting in straight rows on the square plan was advocated because it permits ready cultivation in four different ways. There is no need to prune roots in planting, he said, except to remove broken, damaged, or exceptionally long ones. The hole should be somewhat wider and deeper than necessary to snugly fit the roots.

EDDIE PLANK'S TEAM VICTORS

Gettysburg Bowlers Defeat Chambersburg with Mike Mowery, of Pittsburgh Pirates' Fame, at their Head. Close and Exciting.

Eddie Plank took his bowling quintet to Chambersburg on Wednesday night and, after five exciting games, returned home victorious by a margin of thirty nine pins. Pitted against our own famous twirler was Mike Mowery of the Pittsburgh Nationals and the Casino Alleys, where the games were rolled, were crowded to capacity by enthusiasts.

The rooting would have done credit to a league base ball game and excitement was intense throughout. Chambersburg took the first game by a margin of 43, Gettysburg cut it down to 24 in the second and at the end of the third game Eddie Plank and his friends were ahead by 10 pins. Five games were to be played and the excitement became intense.

In the fourth game the Gettysburgians literally ran away with things. Eddie Plank and Ex-Burgess Holtzworth rolled 101 each; John Brehm scored his highest for the evening, 108, Ira Plank tallied 116, and Bert Hummer, scoring one strike and spare after another, accumulated 141 pins. Against Gettysburg's 567 Chambersburg could score only 460.

And then came the fifth. Mowery started off with 114, and Kottcamp tallied 137. Chambersburg's rooters went wild but their hopes dropped a little when Hoover and Heintzelman pulled in only 89 and 94. Forman, formerly Gettysburg's borough engineer, aroused them again but 135 was the best he could do. Gettysburg was 78 shy of the Franklin County bowlers on this last game but still had thirty nine pins to the good and returned home with a well earned victory. The score:

PAPERS RECOVERED

Were in Box Stolen from Frock Store, Near McSherrystown.

The tin box containing over fifty dollars in cash and a number of valuable papers, which was stolen from the home of William Frock, at the edge of McSherrystown, about two weeks ago, was evidently opened and destroyed in a field near of Blue Gables, as several of the papers were found at that place. An old half dollar identified by the date 1820 was also picked up under a tree near this spot, the coin most likely being folded in the papers and escaped the notice of the thief.

The papers were accidentally found by some children while at play near Blue Gables and were taken home to their parents. The mother without thinking of their possible value burned the papers, but later she thought of the theft which had been committed and another search was made revealing other papers which were identified by Mr. Frock.

Later William Kinsell, a letter-carrier, picked up an old coin in that vicinity and knowing of the robbery, asked Mr. Frock the date of the half dollar which was missing and it turned out to be the stolen money.

No trace of the box has been found and of course the $50 is in possession of the thief.

HEALTH OF THE TOWN IS GOOD

Almost Twice as Many Births as Deaths in Gettysburg during the Past Year. Over Half the Deaths after Fifty Years.

The annual report of the Board of Health presented to the Town Council shows Gettysburg a highly satisfactory place in which to live. During the past year there were but fifty five deaths in the town while ninety eight births were reported. Of the fifty five deaths, thirty three, or three fifths, were persons who had passed the age of fifty.

The total number of deaths actually reported was seventy one but this figure includes the deaths of thirteen non-residents and three still births, a total of sixteen which are not chargeable to the borough. Of the thirteen non-residents, nine died at the time of the battle anniversary.

The list of births includes ninety six white children and two colored; the deaths sixty seven white and four colored. January had the highest number of deaths, eleven; and August the largest number of births, fourteen.

The causes of death show some interesting features. There were thirteen deaths from apoplexy, two from tubercular meningitis, two from cancer, four from pulmonary tuberculosis, There was one death out of the eleven cases of diphtheria and one death in a total of 255 cases of measles. Other deaths were as follows: blood and circulatory system diseases, 8; diseases of the urinary organs, 6; found dead, 2; alcoholism, 1; still births, 3; diseases of children, 5; diseases of the digestive system, 2; diseases of the respiratory system other than tuberculosis, 9; diabetes, 1; accidental poisoning, 1; suicide 1.

During the year the following cases of infectious diseases were reported, measles 255, diphtheria 11, whooping cough 7, typhoid fever 4, erysipelas 4, chicken pox 2. Owing to these cases and the work incident to the fiftieth anniversary celebration the board had an unusual amount to do during the year covered in the report. The matter of the handling of the diphtheria outbreaks is dwelt upon at some length, the report saying:

"Diphtheria was slightly more than usually prevalent—the eleven cases appearing in four outbreaks—January, July, October, and December, sufficiently separated that one cannot be directly charged to the others. Two were confined to the initial case, and the individual cases of the other two were so nearly simultaneous, and widely separated as to locality as to make it improbable that any one is traceable to another."

"It is seldom possible, even with unlimited time, money and opportunity, to determine the source of the infection from which the disease appears apparently de novo—but it is a matter of great gratification that each outbreak has been limited to the initial cases. This we believe is the result of observance of quarantine regulations, willingly accorded by most people, and by others, by reason of the penalty which the policy of the Board, consistently adhered to for some years past, has made certain to follow disregard thereof."

"During the year we successfully conducted one prosecution for violation of the Quarantine Regulations ordained at the beginning of the year, which have worked out very satisfactorily, so far, with the exception of one point."

"The Board, and especially its executive officer, were harshly criticised, recently, by various persons, (some, at least of whom, could be reasonably expected to be sufficiently fair-minded to ascertain the facts in the case before passing sentence) for failure to supply the necessities of life to certain families quarantined for diphtheria."

"The Quarantine Regulations of the Board (Ordinance of Jan. 9, '13) empower the Board, when certain conditions have been fulfilled to furnish such necessities. Two families were reported to the Board as being unable to secure the necessities of life. An officer of the Board immediately visited both places."

"At the one place, he was informed that they were not in need of assistance—the report, evidently being gratuitous, on the part of the informant. At the other, the fact was developed that the head of the household did not want to qualify for the wage earners permit, but wanted to stay at home."

"In the belief that the intent of the

HAS NOT SIGNED

Eddie Plank One of Three Athletic Players Unsigned.

Connie Mack, manager of the world's champion Athletics, announced that he had signed twenty-seven of his players for the season of 1914. Every one of his regulars, except John Coombs and Eddie Plank, pitchers, and Ira Thomas, the catcher, are in line.

The Philadelphia Press says: "Eddie Plank, the grand old man of baseball, is not among those who have signified their willingness to again don the White Elephants' uniform, but he will probably be in line when the season of 1914 gets under way."

"Last year Plank did not sign a contract until the season had almost started. At that time the wonderful southpaw pitcher announced that he was going to retire after a long and meritorious career in baseball, but Manager Mack succeeded in getting the Gettysburg graduate to sign. It will probably be the same this year. Plank is anxious to retire, and if he does he will not be in want. He is worth more than $50,000 and owns considerable farm land up-State."

Witness at Hearing Tells of Big Radium Offer.

U.S. TO TREAT 200,000 PERSONS

Says He Spent $650,000 to Produce
Two Grams, But Will Soon Be Producing a Gram Per Month.

Washington, Jan. 22.—A philanthropist, whose name is withheld, is contemplating the erection at a cost of about $15,000,000 of twenty radium institutes in the United States, equipping each of them with five grams of radium and throwing them open for the treatment of 200,000 cancer victims in the United States.

This assertion was made by Joseph M. Flannery, of Pittsburgh, Pa., president of the Standard Chemical company, manufacturers of radium, who appeared before the house committee on mines and mining in opposition to Secretary of the Interior Lane's proposition to withdraw from public entry the radium bearing lands in the west.

"I am not at liberty to disclose the man's name," said Mr. Flannery, "but he has the plan under consideration. It would be a great boon to humanity. Other men have done great things for humanity. Here is another one willing to do it."

Flannery, when pressed by the committee to say what it would cost the government to buy enough radium to treat all the cancer patients in the country, said:

"I will guarantee, subject to the approval of my board of directors, to sell 200 grams of radium to the government within the next five years, beginning Jan. 1 next, at $80,000 a gram. The market price now is $120,000. And it might be possible to make it cheaper than $80,000 a gram."

Flannery intimated under questioning by committee members that the man he was speaking of was neither John D. Rockefeller nor Andrew Carnegie.

Flannery said that his company had spent in three years $650,000 to produce two grams of radium. The effort had been inspired by the fact that a close relative was afflicted with cancer, he said. The grams cost $480,000 to produce, he estimated, and brought $240,000.

"There is enough radium ore in Colorado to supply the world five times over," said Flannery. "Only 200 grams are needed for the whole of the United States."

Flannery declared that his experiments showed that radium was twenty-five times more valuable for other uses than for cancer treatment. "We have 100 physicians working with it on other diseases with as great results," he added.

Representative Burns asked Flannery what he would charge the government for the process he has evolved for treating radium ores.

"There is a possibility of buying anything from any man," said Flannery, "but we don't want the government to destroy our business. We were the pioneers and the government has no right to come in and run us out."

Vigorous opposition to the proposal to withdraw radium lands from entry was made by Thomas Henaben, state mine commissioner of Colorado, who declared such action would ruin the radium mining industry.

"All we want is to be let alone," he declared. "We are getting out the radium. If you tie up these lands, prospectors will not go into them. As it is ninety-nine out of one hundred prospectors fail. What they need is encouragement, not discouragement, if this radium is to be mined."

HER CLOTHES ARE HIDDEN

Kicking and Screaming, She Was Dragged Into Home, Shouting Love
For Foster.

Philadelphia, Jan. 22.—After a hasty trip by automobile from the Windsor Hotel, in which she was staying in this city with her father, Miss Delilah Bradley, the eighteen-year-old girl, who eloped with Joel M. Foster, her forty-five-year-old admirer, was returned to her home in Pemberton, N. J.

When the entrance to her home was reached the girl, who had rebelled against the return throughout the trip from Philadelphia, screamed and refused to enter. Her father picked her up in his arms and, with the assistance of two detectives, carried her, kicking and screaming, into the house.

The parents took the girl's clothes away from her, gave her a kimono, a night dress and a pair of bedroom slippers and locked her in her room.

They took this action after she had threatened to jump out of the window and run away.

Foster arrived in Philadelphia ten minutes after the girl had been whisked away in an automobile by her parents, her aunt and two private detectives.

He called up the hotel and was surprised to learn that the girl had once more disappeared. He asked for information and was told that none could be given—that Delilah Bradley had been taken to a sanatorium. With an exclamation, he hung up the telephone receiver and shortly afterwards took a train to New York.

Foster has an appointment to meet a lawyer named Weil, of Bordentown, N. J., at the Hotel McAlpen.

On the way to Pemberton the automobile in which the girl was being rushed away broke down and the reporters' car caught up with it.

When the party arrived at the family home the reporters followed the family inside, and Delilah, hysterical and shaken with rage at what she called her abduction, screamed out several times:

"I love Mr. Foster as much as ever and I want the world to know it." Then she shouted charges of persecution by her family. "They dragged me from him by force in Mobile," she exclaimed. "My family kept me confined in the Philadelphia hotel against my will. They dragged me down here and three private detectives took me out of the automobile and dragged me into the house. But I love Mr. Foster as much as ever. Nothing can make me change my mind. I intend to go back to him, no matter what happens."

While the girl was being taken into her father's home she struggled with the detectives and cried: "I want to go back to Mr. Foster."

MRS. ROBERT GOELET
SUES FOR A DIVORCE

Brings Action in Rhode Island Courts, Alleging Cruelty.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 22.—Mrs. Robert Goelet filed suit for divorce against her husband, Robert Goelet, whose wealth is estimated at many millions.

The suit was filed for Mrs. Goelet by Samuel Untermyer, her attorney. Extreme cruelty is given as the ground upon which the divorce is sought.

For six months society has been expecting news of a direct break, but effort after effort was made to patch up the troubles of the young couple, and for a time it was believed that an open breach would be avoided.

Mrs. Goelet was Miss Whelen, of Philadelphia. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Whelen, wealthy and prominent members of society in Philadelphia. Mr. Whelen is now dead and Mrs. Whelen has remarried, being now Mrs. C. Hartman Kuhn.

The Goelets were married on June 14, 1904, at the Church of St. Mary at Wayne, a fashionable suburb of Philadelphia, and the wedding was an event of note.

The bridesmaids were Miss Alice Roosevelt, Miss Francis Griscom, Miss Adelaide Jordan, Miss Esther White Harrison, Miss Pauline Biddle, Miss Edith Bruen, Miss Marion Haven and Miss Nora Iselin. Ogden Mills, of New York, was the bridegroom's best man.

DR. ULSH KILLED

Authority on Smallpox Losses Life in Automobile Accident.

Lewistown, Pa., Jan. 22.—Losing control of a big touring car in which they were riding, Dr. William Ulsh and Brewster Schoch, of Sellers Grove were thrown over an embankment near Middleburg and were injured fatally.

Dr. Ulsh suffered a fractured skull and lived only an hour after the accident. Schoch was taken to a hospital and is not expected to recover. Dr. Ulsh was a surgeon in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad company.

An icy and slippery roadway caused the automobile to skid over the embankment. The machine turned over and pinned the doctor underneath.

Dr. Ulsh was forty-five years old and leaves a widow. He was a graduate of Annapolis and handled smallpox epidemics in the Philippines after the Spanish-American war.

TO FEED 500 OUTCASTS

Helen Gould-Shepard to Celebrate
First Wedding Anniversary.

New York, Jan. 22.—To celebrate her first wedding anniversary, Mrs. Finley I. Shepard, who was Miss Helen Miller Gould, will provide dinners for 500 Bowery outcasts tonight and 200 beds for the homeless.

The dinners will be served at the Hadley Rescue Hall, where Mrs. Shepard entertained 1000 at dinner on the day of her marriage. The repast will precede the nightly gospel meeting, and will comprise soups, roasts and all the accessories of an appetizing and substantial feast.

The 200 extra beds for the homeless will be furnished in addition to the forty that nightly shelter the city's wanderers at Hadley Rescue Hall, in order to care for many who will partake of the dinner.

Atlanta, Ga., Bank Closed.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 22.—The Travelers' bank failed to open its doors for business. Its affairs have been taken in hand by the state bank examiner. The bank was organized about two years ago, with a capital stock of $200,000. Its deposits are said to be less than that amount. It was not a member of the Clearing House association.

Five of Family Die in Fire.
Alpena, Mich., Jan. 22.—Five persons were burned to death here in a fire which destroyed the residence of Samuel Bloise. The victims were Mrs. Bloise, three children and her brother-in-law. Mr. Bloise, a fourteen-year-old son and an infant escaped.

"I have read this book," said the irate patron, "and it is the worst ever. It has the average penny-dreadful looking little Sunday school tract."

KAISERIN REPORTED VERY ILL

Court Curtailed Owing to Weakness of the Empress.

London, Jan. 22.—The Berlin correspondent of the Daily Mail says that Tuesday night's court was curtailed almost one-half on account of the Kaiserin's health, which is unsatisfactory.

Her doctors have told her that she must avoid over-exertion. It is said that she is suffering from heart trouble, which makes it necessary that she abstain from all unnecessary movements of the body and limbs.

Two English physicians were recently called in to consult with the German doctors in regard to this trouble.

MINING UNDER STREETS

Coal Companies Say Scranton Cannot Stop Them.

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 22.—In filing answer to the petition of the city of Scranton to restrain them from mining coal under certain streets in the Green Ridge section, the Scranton and Elk Hill Coal companies admitted that they are mining under the streets, but assert they cannot be stopped because the old deeds permit it.

The coal companies' attorneys attacked the Davis mine cave law, enacted as a solution to the mine cave problem. They allege the law is unconstitutional because it is local legislation.

A TRIPLE MURDER

Man, Sick, Kills Wife, Two Daughters and Himself.

New York, Jan. 22.—Driven insane by the fear that he was dying of consumption, Joseph Sterheim, a government employee, shot and killed his wife, two daughters and himself in their apartments in the Bronx.

Sterheim, who had been an interpreter at Ellis Island for several years, shot the two girls, thirteen and seven years old, and their mother as they were sleeping, and then killed himself beside the latter's bed.

Four Killed at Ottawa Fair.

Ottawa, Jan. 22.—At least four persons were killed at the Howick pavilion, where Ottawa's winter fair is being held, when a boiler exploded in the basement. The pavilion was completely wrecked. Dozens of persons were injured and many valuable horses and cattle were killed or so badly hurt that they were necessary to shoot them.

OUTLAW FARMER GIVES HIMSELF UP

Edward Beardsley Dified the Sheriff For a Week.

Mayville, N. Y., Jan. 22.—Edward Beardsley, the Chautauque county outlaw farmer, who has for over a week defied the efforts of Sheriff Gust Anderson and a posse to arrest him, gave himself up to C. D. Backus, a local man, and was locked up in the jail here.

Backus, who was appointed a deputy sheriff by Sheriff Anderson, effected the "capture" alone and in keeping with a plan agreed upon between him and Beardsley.

The outlaw was taken to the hotel where breakfast was served. He then went to a barber shop, after which he walked to the sheriff's office and for a moment gave himself into the custody of the law.

He was served with a warrant that charged him with assault in the first degree in having shot G. W. Putnam, overseer of the poor of Chautauque county, with intent to kill. Locked in his cell, no one was allowed to see him.

Beardsley's "capture" came after eight days of open defiance of the law and his effective defense of "For Beardsley," as his farm house strong hold became known, dwindled into a burlesque with the outlaw in the principal role.

He would allow anyone to see and talk with him except the sheriff, and he turned his notoriety into money by the sale of autograph postal cards posing for photographers and moving picture men. He boasted that Sheriff Anderson would never "take" him.

A week ago Tuesday Beardsley shot Putnam as the latter was about to take the outlaw's nine children to a county institution. He barricaded the windows and doors of his farm house and kept the sheriff and his posse of twenty-five men at bay by threatening to use the children as a shield against their bullets.

South Dakota Railroad Rate Now 2 1/2

Landlords Too Greedy.

Attempts to fix by statute the wages of agricultural laborers in England were largely responsible for the great revolt of 1381, or "Wat Tyler's rebellion." It represented the despairing effort of landowners to get back to the level of wages before the black death came to make labor dear. But the lord of the manor overshot the mark. He wanted the day wage kept down to four pence to six cents a day. Had he put six pence to eight cents in the schedule there might have been no rebellion.

Africans Eager for Education.

The administrator of northern Rhodesia has undertaken a three-months' tour of the northeastern territory, and covered no less than 1,200 miles on a bicycle. He met every chief in the district, held large play-ers at all the places he visited. He was greatly struck by the fact that most of the chiefs even in the wilder regions, made eager inquiries for education. They asked that the government would send them teachers so that they might read and write.

Invalidable Tact.

Tact, a little word of only four letters, and yet how mighty in the world of business—and in every other realm of human activity as well! A tactless man is a veritable bull in a china shop—more effective in his innocent wreckage of your interests than a round dozen pronounced enemies. Heaven help the merchant who has these destroyers standing between him and his customers.

Jimmie's Conclusion.

Little folk frequently attribute unexpected powers of observation and analysis. Little Jimmie, for instance, was asked if a young lady who he "dearly loved" was pretty. "She looks pretty to me," he announced, "after a brief period of consideration, 'but I don't suppose she's really pretty, 'but I notice Brother Ben don't sit by her side an awful lot when she comes here."

Millionaire's Enjoyment.

Astor was worth ten millions, but he took a personal delight in sitting in the lobby of the Astor House and watching the dollars roll into the palace that his brain had planned. To have an idea, to watch it grow, to then work it out and see it made manifest in concrete substance, this was his joy.

THE PLAIN FROCK OF VELVETEEN IS OFTEN RELIEVED WITH A TOUCH OF BROCADE

Wide waists, shoulders and hips continue modish. The drop-shoulder, the girle and the peg-top skirt are the means employed to bring about this effect, with often a reversion to a bit of extra breadth. This figure is far more graceful than the pinched waists and wide foot-lines of some seasons ago. Velour de laine, old blue, is used for the first costume illustrated here (8054). The sash, cuffs, collar and revers are of a pastel tinted broché silk in which there are touches of old rose and gold. The vest that peeps forth is of a softly tucked cream colored batiste. The wide shoulders and revers add to its effectiveness. This design may be copied in size 36 with 4 1/2 yards of 36 inch material. Black velveteen is here touched to brightness by the bandings of brocade showing several rich shades. This frock gains distinction through simplicity. It closes straight down the back and has an inset yoke of the sheerser net. A wide girle of black grosgrain ribbon passes through slashes on the gown and adds a smart touch. This frock may be made in size 36 with 3 1/2 yards of 36 inch material, with 1 1/2 yards of brocade for trimming. No. 8054—size 34 to 42. No. 8045—size 34 to 42. Each pattern.

CROPS DURING 1913.

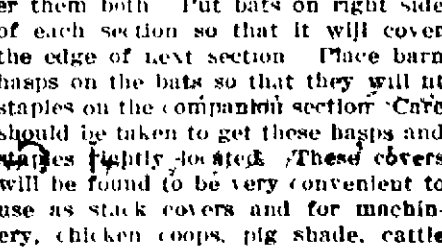

Report of Secretary of Agriculture Shows That They Have Fallen Off.

Very brief space is allotted this year to a discussion of the crops in the United States in the report of the secretary of agriculture. Special emphasis is laid on the fact that the figures quoted are estimates, and it is pointed out that this fact should be constantly kept in mind. From the estimates at hand it appears that the production of crops in 1913 was materially below the average, the yield per acre of all crops combined being smaller than in any year in the past decade with the exception of 1911. The corn crop, the most valuable product of this country, according to the estimates, fell below 2,500,000,000 bushels, which is smaller than any crop since 1903. Wheat production, with an estimated total of 733,000,000 bushels, is the largest ever recorded in this country. This crop was matured before the drought became effective. Brief mention is made as to crop conditions throughout the world. From the estimates it appears that there were increased areas sown to wheat, oats, barley, rye and corn and that the wheat acreage has probably yielded a record return. Barley, oats and rye are bountiful crops, but corn will probably give the poorest result in twenty years.

A DURABLE STACK COVER.

Will Be Found Convenient to Use For Many Purposes.

A very durable stack cover can be made of boards in sections about four feet wide by six feet long. Place four boards, one inch by four feet by six inches side by side and fasten together with braces. Paint joints on upper side and paint bats before covering the joints. Do not run bats way to the top, but run one bat along the top, extending over about two inches on half of them and put no bats on the other half, so that the bat will cover them both. Put bats on right side of each section so that it will cover the edge of next section. Place barn traps on the bats so that they will not staples on the companion section. Care should be taken to get these traps and traps tightly located. These covers will be found to be very convenient to use as stack covers and for machinery, chicken coops, pig shade, cattle shade, etc. Being light and movable, they can be put to a great number of uses and being rigid, are not easily blown away, nor will they sag.—Iowa Homestead.

Winter Care of Peach Trees.

Peach trees are especially subject to the attacks of the San Jose scale. The bark of infested trees is covered with a crust of grayish scales, the insects multiplying rapidly and finally killing the tree. The remedy is spraying with lime-sulphur during the winter. When Electricity For Chickens.

Before the London Royal Society of Arts, Thorne Baker, the electrician, advocated the application of electricity to "chicken farming." Experiments, he said, had proved that chickens could be grown under electric stimulus at about double the normal rate and with a mortality practically nonexistent. An induction coil giving a one inch spark could successfully treat 1,000 chickens.

Field observations which have been conducted lately by the federal department of agriculture seem to indicate in a very conclusive manner that the common skunk occupies a most important place in our agricultural economy. Its food has been found to consist largely of insects, mainly of those species which are very destructive to garden and forage crops. They destroy immense numbers of white grubs, grasshoppers, crickets, cutworms, hornbees, wasps and other injurious insects. The alarming increase in the number of white grubs in some sections is largely due to the extermination of these valuable yet often noxious animals. In connection with the work of the range caterpillar investigations in northeastern New Mexico it has been found that skunks destroy a great many of the pupae of this caterpillar. In many areas, consisting of hundreds of acres, from 25 to 75 per cent of the pupae had been carried off, while in a few isolated places as high as 95 per cent of the pupae had been devoured by skunks. In all instances where the excrement of these animals was examined the shells of the pupae of the range caterpillar were found to comprise a very large percentage.

THE SKUNK.

Following the hearing held by officials of the department of agriculture at Washington a few days before Christmas on the matter of the admission of potatoes from foreign countries, the secretary of agriculture issued two orders which it is thought will control the situation and adequately protect the interests of American potato growers. The first order provides for the admission of disease freed potatoes from uninfected foreign districts under proper regulation and inspection. The other temporarily extends the quarantine against imported potatoes, effective since Sept. 20, 1912, against New Zealand, the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, Great Britain and Ireland, Germany and Austria-Hungary, to include the rest of continental Europe and the Dominion of Canada. As soon as any of the prescribed countries can be shown to be free from disease the quarantine will be lifted, and potatoes will be admitted under proper regulation and inspection.

An Ingenious Mark

By EDITH V. ROSS

Nathan Hartwell, fifty years ago a prospector in the gold regions of Colorado, entered a tavern one evening at B. in a very excited state. A couple of men standing at the bar noticed him and heard him ask the landlord for writing materials. These he took to a table and sat down to write a letter.

"Do you know what's the matter with him?" asked one of his observers.
"No, I don't."

"He's struck a bonanza. There's nothing else in this here country to affect a man like that. I've seen men in that fix before and know the symptoms."

"Well?"
"Well, I think there's somepin in it for us."

"How?"
"We can keep an eye on him, and see where his claim is located and jump
it."

At that moment one of the conspirators noticed a man reading a newspaper by a window and put his finger on his lip. The two emptied their glasses and went out. As soon as they had done so the man reading the newspaper arose and, going to Hartwell, said:

"My friend, I overheard those two men talking about you, and I wish to warn you." Then he told Hartwell what he had heard. Hartwell appeared to be very much affected by the information. He thanked the stranger, but said nothing about the truth or falsity of the conspirators' surmise.

Hartwell had struck a rich vein of ore and was writing to his daughter, Mabel, in the east to announce the fact.

One day Hartwell was found dead near the hole he was pretending to work. Not long after his death two men laid claim to the place where he was supposed to be digging, but finding nothing, they soon abandoned it.

Mabel Hartwell had been posted by her father as to his fears of losing his property, and he had given her some idea as to the location. But the exact spot was unknown to her, her father not daring to state it, fearing that his letter might be interrupted.
As soon as she had been informed of her father's death she determined to go west with a view to claiming his mine.

When she reached the scene of her father's efforts she first made inquiries for the conspirators, but they had left and no one knew where they had gone. Mabel had the good sense to realize that it would be difficult to find and punish them, and even if she did it would not bring her father back to life. She knew that as he had been very desirous that she should have the property he had discovered and set about to find it.

Alone she visited the location that he had given her. She found it in a canyon shut in on either side by high mountains. There was a house at the mouth of the canyon, where she obtained lodgings and set out to try to discover the mine. But she had little hope, for, knowing that her father had been watched, she inferred that he would not mark it. Nevertheless, not long before his death Hartwell had written her that he was trying to find some mark by which in case anything should happen to him he might show her and her alone the exact spot under which lay the rich vein of ore he had discovered, for he had obliterated all trace of his mine.

Mabel hoped that her father had lit upon some mark that only she would understand, but had been stopped from communicating it to her by his sudden taking away. Her experience had made her suspicious of every one, and she dare not take any person with her.
Fortunately it was summer, and the weather was fine. She made daily searches in the canyon, which, though but a mile in length, was very rugged and hard to get over.

One day she came to a rock on which she was much astonished to find her own name, "Mabel," carved in rude letters. Beneath was an arrow and beneath the arrow a date—July 15.
There was no year given, only the month and day of the month. Naturally Mabel turned her glance in the direction the arrow pointed. The first object in line was a perpendicular rock, very thin, its outline being like a sugar loaf. Indeed, one side of it was an edge like an ax, some parts of which were not over a foot thick.

Mabel fell to thinking on the problem. The arrow appeared to be intended to direct her attention to the thin side of the rock, which was directly in line with it. What did the date mean? The day Mabel found the sign was the 20th of June. Her father had been dead nearly a year, having been murdered on the 18th of July, three days after the carved date.
Mabel examined the thin rock carefully and found that a hole half an inch in diameter had been drilled through its thinnest part. Mabel at once inferred that this hole had something to do with the date inscribed with the arrow and her name.

The date carved on the rock would come around in two weeks, and Mabel resolved to wait and look through the drilled hole on the day mentioned. She did not need to look through it, for on that day the sun sent its light through it, making a spot on the ground some thirty feet distant. Mabel, hopeful, marked the spot, went away and, having made her claim, returned with those she could trust. The earth was excavated, and the mine was found. Before leaving for home Mabel sold it for $100,000 and a quarter interest.

Serious Indeed!

Gabe—"I saw the doctor's auto in front of your house today." "Anything serious?" Steve—"Serious."
Should say so. He collected his bill."

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

THE actual money gain
in a small farm comes from above
the average in quality and quantity.

Those who stand on the common level
can't get a living, but not much more than a living
need.

character and purpose just as running a store or a factory does.

If the usual profit in a flock of hens is $1 each above the cost of food the aim should be to increase egg production and the sale of broilers or other kinds of fancy poultry so that there will be a profit of $2 for each hen kept. This is to be accomplished by selecting pullets from the best laying mothers and by breeding up with full blooded males.

If the cows in a dairy herd are paying an average of $100 a year, make an effort to raise it to $200. Perhaps the quickest way to gain this end is by discarding all animals that fail to give five gallons of milk per day for the greater part of the year. The stock may be gradually improved by selection and breeding. It may be possible also to sell a part of the milk or cream to private customers who will pay double the wholesale rate.

It is not necessary that the farmer should replace all of his grade cows with high priced, pure bred Holsteins, Jerseys, Guernseys, or Ayrshires.
However, for successful and profitable dairying it is absolutely necessary that he realize the remarkable difference in productive capacity of the individual cows in the same herd, though these cows are cared for by the same man and are consuming practically the same amount of feed.

Recently a herd of hogs from the northwest was sold in one of the central markets for $3.50 per 100 pounds.
A herd of similar size from a so called corn belt state sold for $7.95. This herd on the same farm had a variety, including barley, alfalfa, and some corn and some sugar beet strip. The other herd of hogs was fattened almost exclusively on corn.

Not only did the northwestern hogs
bring a higher price per 100 pounds, but they put on flesh more rapidly and economically than the others and were muzzling way more satisfactory. With the present knowledge of alfalfa growing no farmer, even in the strictly corn states, can find a reasonable excuse for not buying some of this to feed his hogs.

Hogs need to run at large in a field where there is clover. This may be clover, alfalfa, rape or arclokes. In this way they attain growth and put on flesh better than they will if penned up. If they can have water or skimmed milk once a day this will assist the economical production of meat.
The aim must be to bring the hog up to 200 or 300 pounds at such a moderate cost that there will be a liberal profit when it is marketed.

With an abundance of hay and corn
there ought to be a good profit in fattening beef animals, few or many, according to the size of the farm. It would appear that with the judicious selection of feeders, with the careful handling of the animals while in the feed lot and with an even break on other conditions, cattle feeding ought to be fairly profitable.

Farmers have come to realize the value of maintaining soil fertility and are using manure as liberally as possible. Land, to be made a source of continuous profit, must be kept fertile.
The proper rotation of crops combined with the raising of live stock, will contribute largely in the maintenance of soil fertility.

Intelligent, painstaking effort,
based upon the teachings of science, is the price of many farmers' success.

Care of Plants in Winter.

Look to the dahlia and chrysanthemum stock in the garden. If too damp moist with water, remove and cause decay if not removed. Spread the tuber-ous where the soil is dry and separate the perfectly good roots from those touched with mold. If, on the contrary, the roots look shriveled, put them near the floor in a damp corner of the cellar. Ventilation must be given to the cellar during the winter to keep it dry.

Be very sure that there are no cracks or loose window panes to let in draft and frost.

AN ICEHOUSE FOR THE FARM.

Where the getting of a supply of ice is not attended by too great expense of inconvenient plans should be made soon now for an icehouse which will furnish an ample supply for next summer's use in the house and dairy. A considerable sum of money may be put into such a structure, but that is not neCESSARY if one has rough lumber with which to construct it. Excellent boards may be made of clay, hollow blocks, cement blocks and also of rough lumber that would not be worth much for anything else. Of course the better the lumber and the closer the boards fit the less will be the evaporation. In making ready for the ice house it is well to see that the site selected is naturally well drained. Some poles or short pieces of wood should first be laid down and a layer of sawdust over these. This forms a porous foundation, which will keep the lower stratum of cakes from resting in water soaked sawdust. While it is well to have a double wall, so that sawdust may be put between, it is not an indispensable condition. The house's supply should be about fourteen feet square. In piling the tiers of ice it should not come nearer than fifteen inches to the walls, while a sufficient space should be left above the ice to give good circulation of the air. Cakes cut 18 by 22 inches and about ten inches in thickness are a convenient size to handle. After three or four weeks the sawdust will have soaked considerably and should be then be tamped down with a board or pole.

FIVE TRUST BILLS NEARLY READY

Senate and House Committees Are at Work.

CALL THEM "5 BROTHERS"

Measures Carrying Out Wilson's Views to Be Presented as Quickly as Possible.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Five bills to carry out the suggestions of President Wilson's trust message are being completed in congress. The bills will embrace the following:

An interstate trade commission, with inquisitorial powers into corporations and authority to aid the courts and keep big business within the law.

Prohibition of interlocking directorates in interstate corporations, railroads and national banks.

Empowering the interstate commerce commission to regulate the issuance of railroad stocks and bonds.

A Sherman law definitions bill, that would define specifically what constitutes conspiracy in restraint of trade.

A general trade relations measure seeking to eliminate "cut throat" competitive business and which would provide punishment for individuals instead of business and made it possible for firms or individuals injured by unlawful business restraint to avail themselves of findings against combinations and institute suits in equity for relief.

Following a conference at the White House, members of the house judiciary and senate interstate commerce committees went to the capitol with the program as outlined in mind and revision of tentative drafts of measures already prepared was undertaken.

Senator Newlands, chairman of the committee, which will have charge of the legislation in the senate, and Chairman Clayton, Representatives Carlin and Floyd, of the house judiciary committee on trust legislation, were in the conference with the president.

Representative Adamson, chairman of the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce, which will have jurisdiction over the bills relating to government supervision of railroad securities and interstate trade commission, expects to confer with President Wilson. There is already pending before his committee a railroad securities bill drawn by himself, which will form the basis for the administration measure.

A trade relations bill drafted by the judiciary sub-committee and Senator Newlands and shown to the president may be introduced by Senator Newlands, and, with other measures pending, turned over to the Adamson committee to aid it in its work.

Senator Newlands was with the president a short time, laying before him a redraft of his bill for an interstate trade commission. Mr. Newlands proposed consolidating the various bills into a single administration measure. The question, however, was not determined finally.

Sensor Newlands also discussed vacancies on the interstate commerce commission with the president. Nominations are expected within a few days.

HIRED 'WIFE' TO WEEP FOR HIM

But Court Learns of Trick and Sentences Picpocket.

New York, Jan. 22.—When, nearly a year ago, Samuel Berman was arraigned before Judge Nott in the court of general sessions on a charge of picking pockets, a wistful woman, with four children clinging to her skirts, wept pitifully.

The prisoner said she was his wife. The court, touched, suspended sentence and a collection of $100 was taken up for the family.

Berman was in court again on a similar charge. The court eyed him wrathfully. He had learned that the prisoner's "wife and children" of a year ago had been hired for the occasion.

The prisoner pleaded guilty to dipping the judge and to picking pockets. He was sentenced to five years in Sing Sing.

VOLCANO RIPPED ISLAND

500 Reported Perished on Ambrim, New Hebrides Group.

Sydney, N. S. W., Jan. 22.—The entire face of Ambrim Island, in the New Hebrides group, was altered by the volcanic upheavals of last month, according to official advices.

It is estimated that 500 natives perished. The site of the mission hospital now lies beneath eighty feet of water, while there are two miles of hilly country where ships previously floated.

Fall Downstairs Kills.

Pottsville, Pa., Jan. 22.—Charles L. Adam, of Mahanoy City, fell down a flight of stairs at a hotel at Barnesville and was killed. He was one of a sleighing party from Mahanoy City. It is believed he tripped at the top of the stairway.

German Army Aviator Killed by Fall.

Munich, Germany, Jan. 22.—Sergeant Schweisser, a German army aviator, was killed here by falling with his aeroplane, which he attempted to turn too sharply.

JAPAN STIRS UP LAND CASE

Baron Makino Suggests Change in Plan For Its Solution.

Tokio, Jan. 22.—Japan regards as unsatisfactory the replies made by the United States to her protests in connection with the California alien land ownership legislation, according to a statement made by Baron Nobuaki Makino, the Japanese foreign minister, in the course of a lengthy summary of the Japanese-American negotiations given in his annual address to parliament. He continued:

"Japan recognizes the necessity of elaborating other plans for the solution of the question. The nature of these plans I am as yet unable to report."

Baron Makino's declaration that "no answer whatever" had been made by the United States to Japan's third protest presented in August was the signal for an attack on the government by several members of the opposition, who alleged that too much reliance had been placed on the good will of America.

MEDALS AWARDED 30 FOR HEROISM

Pensions For Dependents of Those Who Gave Lives.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 22.—Individual acts of heroism which the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission has recognized since it was established ten years ago were brought up to a total of 871 when thirty names were added to the honor roll.

In eleven cases silver medals were awarded, in nineteen cases bronze medals. Seventeen of the heroes lost their lives, and to the dependents of thirteen of these pensions aggregating $7680 were granted, and to the dependents of the other four who sacrificed their lives, sums totaling $3000, to be applied subject to the approval of the commission, to the liquidation of indebtedness or to meet other expenses.

In three cases sums aggregating $4000 were appropriated for educational purposes, payments to be made as needed and approved, and in nine cases awards aggregating $8200 were made, to be applied toward the purchase of homes or other worthy purposes.

The youngest heroes were two boys, twelve years old, of Oshkosh, Mich. The following are included in the list announced:

Gordon T. Granger, Bayonne, N. J., foreman of a gas compressor plant, saved a comrade from suffocation, Jan. 9, 1912. Silver medal.

Edward A. Dalton, Bayonne, N. J., saved Gordon T. Granger, who himself had gone to the rescue of a comrade from suffocation in a manhole at Bayonne, Jan. 9, 1912. Awarded a bronze medal.

Eugene W. Rife, of Hanover, Pa., who died while trying to save George R. Gordon from drowning, July 7, 1912. Bronze medal to Rife's father.

Francesco Corsaro, of Clymer, Pa., shot and permanently disabled in saving Matthew Leonard, policeman, from assassination by three foreigners, Nov. 13, 1913. Seventy-five dollars monthly and bronze medal.

PITTSBURGH CHURCH BURNED

Flames Jump Street and Burn Half Dozen Residences.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 22.—Intense excitement was created here when a general alarm fire too all the downtown fire companies to Fifth avenue and Brady street, where St. Agnes' Catholic church, an immense frame structure, was in flames.

Next door to the church was the Soho public school, but its 600 pupils were removed without panic.

Within an hour the church had been destroyed and, fanned by a strong wind, the flames had jumped Fifth avenue and attacked half a dozen residences on the opposite side of the street. The St. Agnes parish house also caught fire and the Soho public baths were endangered.

Telephone Operators Raised 10%.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 22.—The Cleveland Telephone company announced an increase in wages of 10 per cent to 1000 telephone operators, effective the first of this month.

A FAD OF THE MOMENT IS THE SHORT COAT

The short coat is favored in Paris by the leading gown and suit makers and promises to be a feature of the spring styles. Many of them are belted, others are on the bolero order. The bolero is charmingly suited to the new skirts with their ruffled and draped hips and is far too becoming a mode not to "catch on." If the hip trimmed skirts continue popular and every indication is that they will, the vogue of the short coat is assured.

The modish short sleeve is three-quarter or full length although we glimpse here and there a short sleeved model that is decidedly smart.

Number 2140 is an unusual little coat in embossed velvet. It has a three-quarter kimono sleeve, a rolled collar and smartly cut revers which may be rolled back as illustrated, or closed and buttoned on the side front.

The skirt (2148) is a peg-top, draped in panther effect in front. It is made up in black chiffon velvet.

A smart feature of number 2153 is the raglan effect in the back of the blouse. The sleeve is a full-length design; the shaped peplum and the small sailor collar are effective touches. A two-piece skirt completes the costume.

Dull green duretyen is the material used with a narrow strip of skunk edging the blouse. Collar and cuffs are of broadened velvet in soft colors.

Number 2140—sizes 34 to 42.
Number 2148—sizes 22 to 30.
Number 2153—sizes 14 to 18.

HORSE LORE.

Try to turn your horse back to the wind and blanket him when tying him up.

Give a bran mash Saturday night or Sunday noon and on Wednesday night also if work is slack.

The actual cost to keep added to the service fee of the hire represents the amount at which horses you raise stand you.

Do not forget to salt the horse once a week, or better still, keep salt always before him. He knows best how much he needs.

Be so careful in the choice of a blacksmith that it is not necessary for your horse to wear an interfering boot.

DISEASES OF HOGS.

Worms and Lack of Mineral Matter Often Cause Serious Loss.

Whenever and wherever hog cholera is prevailing all other epidemics to which swine are subject are apt to be classified as hog cholera. Here is an incident that took place in Will county, Ill., which is a case in point. The same is related by the Farmer's Review as illustrating the value of a county adviser.

One day a hurry up call was received from a farmer whose hogs were dying from supposed cholera. Of 300 head but fifty were left, and the external appearance of these did not indicate cholera. The adviser had a sick one killed and immediately made a postmortem examination. The vital organs were found to be in a healthy condition, but the intestines were full of worms. Mr. Grannis advised a vermifuge for expelling the worms and the feeding of a mixture of limestone screenings, rock phosphate and wood ashes. This advice was followed, and no further loss of pigs followed. This advice is invaluable to the hog raiser. Worms and lack of mineral matter are two great causes that contribute to a bad physical condition, which makes pigs susceptible to any disease that may come along, and if they die in any number it is called cholera.

WARDING OFF CHOLERA.

Prevention of Disease in the Hog Herd Better Than Treatment.

There is a farm in central Ohio which is noted for its fine hogs. There are always from 150 to 300 good porkers on it, says the Farm and Fireside. Cholera has raged all about it, but there has never been a case on the farm. It is a farm of over 1,000 acres. No water is used from any source outside the farm. So no infection can come in the water the hogs drink.

One day a neighbor came wandering through the place. The owner halted him and asked him whether the report was true that he came from a farm infected with cholera. The neighbor admitted that his hogs were dying of

A Case of Repentance

By MARGARET C. DEVEREAUX

We have usually presumed that repentance must come before death. Eleanor Blake lost her father when she was a little girl, and her mother for a second husband one William Markland, a widower with a son, at the time of the marriage twelve years older than his stepfather. The widow was very poor, and Mr. Markland was rich. His son, Joseph, was a singular youth, sometimes under the influence of pure and noble emotions and sometimes apparently awayed by the devil himself. When he was in the former condition he was very kind to Eleanor, but when in the latter he seemed to hate her.

Eleanor was a favorite with her stepfather and he hoped when she grew to be a woman she would marry his son, for he was aware of the latter's Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde disposition, and he believed that she would be able to tame him over his evil periods, but he only wished for this; he did not attempt to bring it about. Eleanor's mother died when she was fifteen years old, and after being made again a widower Mr. Markland's affection for his little stepdaughter was much enhanced. His son's periods of wickedness seemed to be increasing on him and were a source of distress to his father.

Then Joe Markland, when Eleanor was seventeen years old, delighted his father by showing evidence that he was falling in love with his stepfather. Eleanor, however, seemed to regard him only as a brother, but as such was extremely fond of him. He asked for a different love, and when she told him that it was not possible for her to give it to him he fell into one of his wicked states and treated her shamefully.

Joe Markland disappeared one day and was not seen at home again for a long while. Meanwhile his father failed in health, and Eleanor was his sole comfort. She considered it her duty as well as her preference to remain single and to minister to him, though she had many suitors. All this time no one knew where Joe Markland was till a few months before his father died when Eleanor received a letter from him evidently written in one of his angelic moods. He regretted that he could not love her, but did not blame her. He wrote to ask her forgiveness for the way he had treated her.

Eleanor wrote that his father could not live long, and begged him to come home and give the invalid what comfort he could during the short time that remained before death. Joe wrote that he would come at once, but though only a few weeks were needed for the journey, he did not arrive for several months. He reached home the day his father died, and it was perhaps as well that he did not arrive sooner, for, though he showed no outward signs of his mood to those who did not know him well, he was, nevertheless, in one of his devilish conditions. His father was barely able to bid him goodby and whispered to him that he hoped he would some day assure Eleanor for his wife.

Joe took charge of the household and household affairs till after the funeral, when a search was made for the will. No will was found. Joe, being sole heir at law, took possession of the property and told Eleanor that if she would marry him he would turn over the management of it to her. Eleanor refused. Quite possibly, knowing as she did that her stepfather desired the match, she might have yielded, but she saw that Joe was at the time not his better self.

Joe Markland remained at home long enough to put his estate under a competent manager, whom he directed to pay his sister $50 a month and permitted her to remain in the homestead.

One morning looking out of an upper window she saw her stepbrother coming. Though some distance from her, he appeared bedraggled. He was walking rapidly, and she had scarcely seen him when she heard him at the door. She ran down to meet him, but he was not where she had expected to find him. Thinking he had entered before her, she went into the living room. There stood Joe with a heavenly look on his face, such as she had often seen there when he had become repentant. She was about to spring toward him when she noticed that he was dripping with water. And singularly enough there was a salt odor about him. She ran out of the room to get something in which to wrap him till he could change his clothing, and when she returned with a blanket she had snatched from a bed Joe was not there.

What had become of him? She was about to run into the hall to look for him when she noticed on a table a folded document. She took it up and found it soaked with water. Clinging to it was a fine strand of seaweed.

The paper was found to be a will of William Markland, leaving all his property to his stepdaughter, Eleanor Blake.

Eleanor was found lying on the floor in a swoon, and an illness followed. When she recovered she said that she had found the will in the attic under a heap of books. Soon after this news came of the death of Joe Markland. He had been known to visit in an inlet on the coast of the mainland, stolen the will while his father was sleeping and possibly in the same room with him?

Be Pretty! Turn Gray Hair Dark

Try Grandmother's old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also cures dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wych's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you damaged your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

Effective November 16, 1913.
